

Patient Information

There is so much health information on the internet. Google will find you results but are they trustworthy? Remember anyone can create a website & the information may not always be accurate.

When searching for reliable health information try these websites:

NHS Choices www.nhs.uk

Launched in 2007, NHS Choices is the official website of the NHS in England and the best place to start for health information.

Use the search box, or browse the Health A-Z. You can also check your symptoms using the Symptom Checker, browse healthy living information and find local services. There is even a section on “Behind the Headlines” to help you find the truth behind newspaper stories.

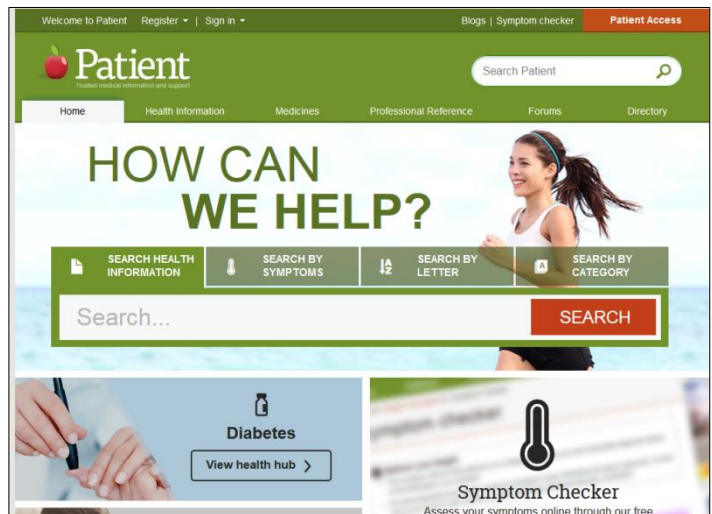

Patient patient.info

An independent UK source of trusted health information – the editorial panel are all doctors.

You can search for information, browse the A-Z or use the symptom checker. It also contains discussion forums and a Medicines A-Z.

There is also a directory of National Support groups <https://patient.info/directory>

NHS Evidence evidence.nhs.uk

Developed by NICE (National Institute for Health and Care Excellence), this website is aimed at NHS staff but it is accessible to all. It contains links to guidelines and best evidence and searches can be narrowed to “information for the public”
